

Dual enrollment: Earn college credit at your high school

You're in the class; why not get credit for it?

Dual enrollment is a program through Chandler-Gilbert Community College (CGCC) that allows you to earn college credit while attending your high school classes that can then transfer to a community college or four-year university.

It is different than advanced placement (AP) classes which require you to pass a test to earn college credit. Passing an AP class does not guarantee credit, and colleges vary on their acceptance of AP class credits.

Dual enrollment students receive a grade and credit for work completed throughout the year. These credits usually transfer to your college of choice as direct course equivalents. CGCC and the Maricopa County Community Colleges District have agreements with the three Arizona state universities as well as many out-of-state colleges to accept dual enrollment class credit.

Save thousands on tuition and books

By participating in CGCC's dual enrollment program, you earn college credit that can fulfill many university general studies requirements, including English, math, science, history and language courses.

This means you pay community college prices for university-level classes. Savings also come from your high school providing the necessary text books and being able to complete a four-year degree program more quickly due to transferred credits.

"Since the classes are my high school classes, I'm already familiar with the teachers and campus so there's less to worry about."

How it works

Your high school will distribute information explaining how to register for dual enrollment during the first week of classes. You can also learn more about your school's dual enrollment options at cgc.edu/dual.

Dual enrollment classes follow a college curriculum and are taught at your high school by highly qualified faculty with the professional credentials to teach community college classes.

To be eligible, students must meet college admission requirements. Some classes may require you to pass a free placement test.

“Because I took advantage of the dual enrollment program, I graduated college a year early and have more money available for graduate school!”
