

How to Disable the Pop-up Blocker: A Comprehensive Guide

A pop-up blocker can be useful if you are not wanting random windows appearing, which can contain ads or spam. However, some websites require opening a pop-up window, which can be a form, information, a sign-in page, or a page that leads to an external website (such as accessing another website from your Canvas course, for example).

When you need to enable or disable pop-ups, please follow the steps listed according to your preferred browser:

- 1. Chrome
- 2. Firefox
- 3. Safari
- 4. Internet Explorer

CHROME

Method #1:

1. You will see a message in the address bar about a pop-up being blocked

2. Click on the pop-up blocked icon and you will see the following options:

- Always allow: The next time you open this website, future pop-ups will be allowed
- Continue blocking: Pop-ups will be or remain blocked on this website
- Manage: This will take you directly to Chrome's pop-up settings
- 3. Select Always allow... to allow for pop-ups, then click on the X or Done button (You may have to refresh the page.)

Method #2

1. In Chrome, go to the three dots icon and select Settings

2. Select Privacy and security, or search the phrase "pop-up" in the search bar

3. Select Site Settings, then click on Pop-ups and redirects

4. To allow for pop-ups, make sure you have selected Sites can send pop-ups and use redirects

You can also set what websites are allowed or are not allowed if you would like to customize your settings. You can still list websites if you have a default setting selected
